Our efforts in reconstruction works will be for provision of drinking water, but our work will encourage improved sanitation and promote good hygiene practices. Improving water supplies means providing water more reliably, of better quality and closer to households, thereby reducing water -related disease and freeing time for women to undertake more productive activities and for girls to attend school. We have integrated programmes for sanitation and hygiene promotion into our activities to ensure that these wider benefits for women and the whole community are achieved and sustained.

목적 / 내용

At present, there is a poor understanding of population exposure in developing countries, which causes major challenges when making Disaster Risk Management decisions. METEOR takes a step-change in the application of Earth Observation exposure data by developing and delivering more accurate levels of population exposure to natural hazards. Providing new consistent data to governments, town planners and insurance providers will promote welfare and economic development in these countries and better enable them to respond to the hazards when they do occur.
